COURSE DESCRIPTION: Expand your professional knowledge and apply new skills to every patient entrusted in your care. Join us for this interactive course to learn what biofilms are and why this term best describes the oral microbial communities. Identify the characteristics and behaviors of biofilms, and most importantly, understand how the scientific evidence of biofilm impacts our treatment options and choices in our quest to provide optimal care for each of our individual patients.

Discover how traditional treatments may be damaging restorations and how you can conservatively remove biofilm without causing harm. We will explore the research on oral and dental biofilms which has significantly improved our understanding of Pathophysiology of periodontal disease and has led to new paradigms for therapeutic procedures. Realize you can scale less and remove MORE biofilm. Come see what the future of dental appointments looks like, get prepared for the expectations in dental hygiene and uphold your lifelong professional development.

Course Objectives:

- Explain the impact of biofilm removal to achieve periodontal debridement.
- Identify technologies to make your job easier.
- Differentiate between powders available in the US and their application in biofilm removal
- Understand the principals of Guided Biofilm Therapy

- Demonstrate use of low particle powders (erythritol and glycine) on typodont

INSTRUCTOR: Wendy Bebey, RDH, BS is a 1992 graduate of the dental hygiene program at Luzerne County Community College. Additionally, Wendy earned her Bachelor of Science degree in Workforce Education and Development from the Pennsylvania State University. Wendy practiced in general and periodontal offices and held an adjunct clinical faculty position prior to making the transition from clinical practice to corporate. Wendy started her corporate career as a sales representative and found herself on a career-path that would ultimately lead her to become a sought-after hygienist for speaking, writing, and representing oral care companies. Wendy has been lecturing as a corporate speaker for over fifteen years and is proud to represent Hu-Friedy, a world leader in innovation and supporter of dental hygiene.
